The gloomy trees whispered in the wind mysteriously.

Beneath me the unearthly ground crackled giving me the chills.

The bloodcurdling trees petrified me.

The crispy branches looked like a pack of mouldy fries.

The sober sky joylessly gave shade to the forests.

crystalline clouds covered the sky beautifully.

Thick branches swayed in the sunlight.

The forest

By Alexander

The forest, like a green mountain of vegetation

Twisted its way through a valley

And opened into a ring around a volcano

A smouldering giant, wearing a green dress.

As I walked into the forest, the light shone

Like an emerald and filtered through the trees like a river.

As I entered the forest, birds twittered having their merry chat in the sunlight.

Forest horses galumphed and leapt around while a pair of bear cubs wrestled over
Some honey.

But as you go deeper into the forest,

Its niceness disappears and the forest turns into a moody, angry fellow.

The sky darkens and on cue,

Twisted trees with black trunks snarled at each other

While birdsong disappeared from my ears.

Sinister rustling turned my senses to Jell-O.

But, entranced by some smell of fire,

I kept on going without tire.

FOREST

BY CHARLIE

Spooky

The eerie light dived
Around like a robin,
As the dusky trees hung
Over my terrified soul.

The mulchy brown
Leaves squelched,
As I carefully
Trod on them.

Bright

Leaves waved at each
Other from across the trail,
As the bright light of the Sun shined on them.

The dewy grass swayed
In the light breeze,
As the clouds crept
Across the sky.

THE FOREST By

Christo

The Peaceful birds hummed through the trees.

The colourful leaves danced in the wind.

The tranquil sky was as blue as the sea.

The relaxing frogs croaked next to calm lake.

The humid rain made craters in the crystal blue water.

The gloomy, moonlit forest was dead silent.

The dim light shone in my eyes.

The dark hollow tree stood crumbling. The hazy moon glimmered in the sky.

The rain was constantly pattering my face.

The creepy path twisted and turned until it seemed it would never stop.

The forest

By Darcy

Phantom wails drift through the trees

Carried by wind big and small through the brambles,

Malevolent cackles reverberate around

Spilling through the trees in torrents.

Pearly white light bathed the path before me, drifting like souls

Whistling around through the breeze. The phantoms search

For a meaning in life. They cling on to my clothes, tugging.

I rush forward on the broken path.

Slowly along the path the wind breathed life into the forest,

Trees regained their emerald glow and smiled down at me,

Golden light spilled through the leaves,

The stone-cold forest was replaced by one of unity and joy.

Birds chirped once more and replaced the phantom wails,

Golden light bathed the ground and path,

Squirrels chattered in the trees,

The forest was a place of harmony once more.

The Forest

By Edward

The mist slunk through the trees
Like a snake curling itself around the trunks;
A veil concealed the secrets within.
And a ferocious cyclone punched through the ground.

Vampires pierced the ground
Grasping for souls of children.
The jagged path groaned for help,
As the agony of the small burning fire continued.

The jubilant bushes waved a hello
As the halcyon leaves brushed against each other.
The radiant sun at the peak of dawning,
And the effervescent stones as jocund as Christmas.

The exuberant wind twirled: dancing, and prancing with glee.
As the rich soil comforted the blissful plants and animals' feet.
Both tall and small reunited in love and peacefulness,
As the sun drifted down, down, down, sinking into the horizon.

FOREST POEM

By Felix

*The trees waved in the wind;
The glowing moss smiled back,
Squirrels pranced through the forest
And robins chirped in joy.*

*Dusk fell and with the dim light
The wood began to eerily move.
The animals that were so bubbly and cheerful in daylight
Became skeletal and horrific, wraithlike beasts.*

*The mist slunk through the trees
Like a snake curling itself around the trunks:
A veil concealed the secrets within.*

*An owl skimmed over my head
Giving a hoot of triumph as it seized its squeaking prey.
A sinister silence enveloped the forest once more.*

*The malevolent trees
Twisted themselves into unnatural shapes,
Tripping me up with their long spindly legs*

*The sun rose, sending a radiant light
Dancing over the glowing leaves.
A gleeful bird flitted from tree to tree,
The forest was radiant once more.*

THE FOREST

BY FRANKLIN

Before me stood the vast forest glimmering in the sunlight

Shining up the branches.

The brown, soft path of soil

Felt like stepping into a room of pillows

The bushes were greener than an emerald.

The dark, blacked out grass merged into

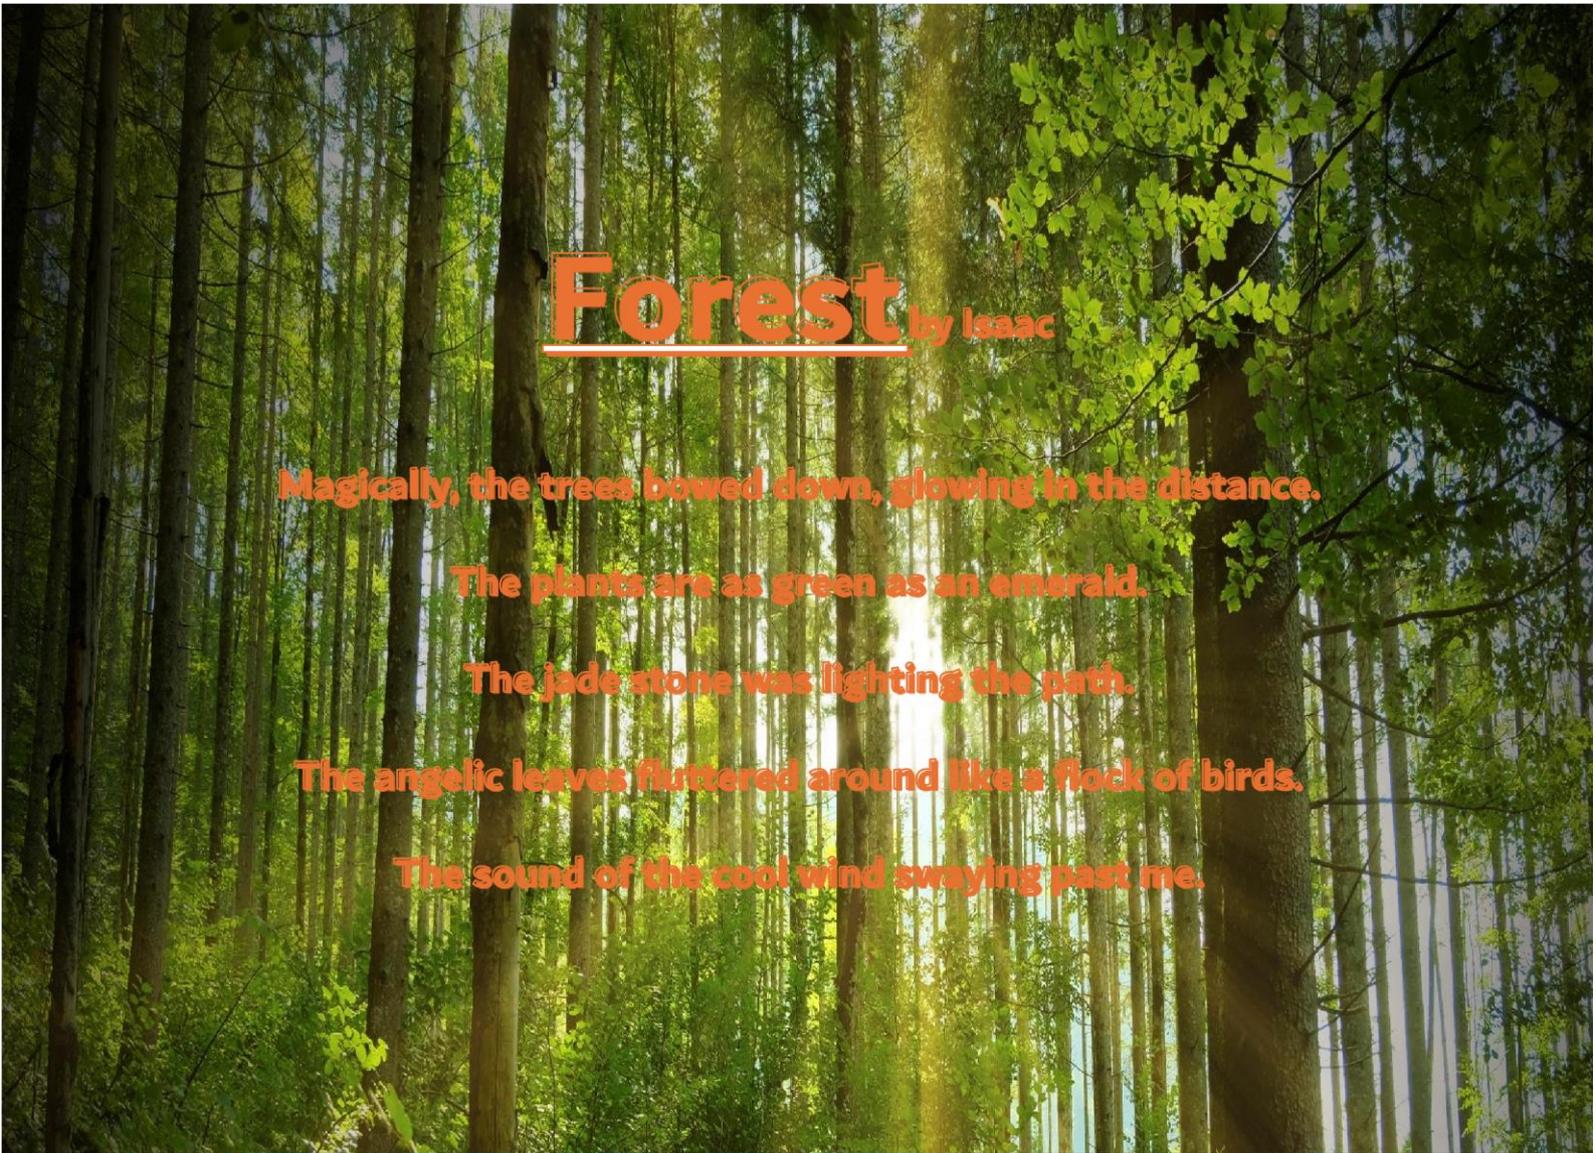

The gloomy, rotting trees, and the soil was

So bad - I'd rather smell garbage.

As I strolled along the long path

Some tiles cracked behind me.

Magically, the trees bowed down, glowing in the distance.

The plants are as green as an emerald.

The jade stone was lighting the path.

The angelic leaves fluttered around like a flock of birds.

The sound of the cool wind swaying past me.

The wind was shattering in my cold ears.

The dark trees crept towards me.

Spookily, the leaves crunched; the branches snapped.

I could see shadows passing by the black trees.

I could hear the howl from the unknown

In the forest, the trees whispered mysteriously, As if they were telling secrets.

The leaves of the bushes murmured,
And the light broke through to the woods.

Suddenly, the forest darkened like a starless night.
The malevolent and twisted trees grasped me. A crash of thunder lit up the obsidian sky Two forests acting as one.

Abruptly the forest became shadowy, as dusk broke.
And the bushes rustled as they crept towards me.
The ebony thickets of fog engulfed the greenery.
And the darkness gripped the trees.

Gradually, the forest lit up like a lamp.
The moss waved at the tree trunks.
The bushes smiled, the leaves hummed.
And the forest was alive once more.

The forest by Rocky

The refreshing breeze travelled through the forest,

The enormous tree leaned over the wiggly path.

The sage moss covered the kinky path,

The froggy frog croaked on the path.

Creepy forest

The dark grass was separated by the curly path,

The birds fly while they cried.

The big frogs crashed through the leaves while looking for safety,

The creepy birds hunting for frogs.

*Walking into the vast forest,
The trees twisted over my head.
The twigs scattered over the floor.
The moonlight squeezed through the trees.
I squelched through the mud.*

*Then I walked into the cave.
Roots were leaking through the ceiling.
My terrified sole was under the rocky Landslide up on the roof.*

That day I never forgot that Day NEVER FORGOT

Forest by Teddy

WHEN THE SUN ROSE IN THE MORNING
THE LEAVES WAVED AT EACH OTHER.
AS THE SUN BOWED DOWN TO THEM,
IT SMILED LIKE A CHESHIRE CAT.

THE GLOOM GREW UNDERNEATH THE GROUND.
THE EERIE LIGHT DOVE AROUND LIKE A RAVEN.
THE DUSKY CANOPY HUNG OVER MY TERRIFIED SOUL,
AND THE GLOOM GREW, GREW, GREW.

THE DEWY GRASS SWAYED IN THE WIND
AND THE SUN BURST OUT AND CAUSED A SHINE
THE CLOUDS SURROUNDING IT LIKE IT IS A GOD

THE MOON ROSE AND THE TERROR STARTED,
EVERYTHING WENT QUIET AND THE GLOOM TOOK OVER,
TREES GOT CONSUMED BY IT AND IT TOOK OVER

The Forest

The bunny capered the damp woods
 As jubilant bracken smiled at the sun
 While blue tits twittered in the breeze
 The trees stood as guardians

The path was a snake slithering between the trees
 While the warped trees grasped their arms out for me

Then the owl hooted and wag
 As the murky mist covered the forest

The Forest

The twisty branches whispered in the wind
A gloomy light crept on the shattered path,
Leading towards the thorns on the vines.

Dim eyes were surrounding me.

The trees surrounded me,
With joy and rich warmth,
The sun shone on the golden leaves, The ladybugs scampered over them.
